

Managing the Work Environment After Coronavirus

Learn how to remain compliant with all of the changes taking place.

Free Webinar presented by

10:00 - 11:15 a.m. CDT
Thursday, October 22, 2020

Featuring Labor Attorney Pam Bourne
Woods and Aitken, LLC

Principal attorney who has been providing clear answers for our members' employment law questions and sound legal guidance for more than 17 years.

The COVID-19 pandemic rapidly changed the workplace and required employers to quickly adapt to a new way of managing their employees. While much remains unknown about the fall-out from COVID-19, there will certainly be implications on workplaces that will require special attention to stay compliant with labor and employment laws.

This webinar will address and provide clear guidance for effectively navigating through the many changes employers are now dealing with, including:

- revisions made to federal labor and employment laws as a result of COVID-19;
- compliance with anti-discrimination laws and health and safety regulations;
- legal concerns for managing a remote workforce and flexible work schedules;
- return to work policies;
- what NIRMA members might expect to see moving forward; and
- answers to specific questions you may have regarding your own workplace.
