There have been numerous COVID-19 claims made by Nebraska employees over the past year. The pandemic also has impacted employees' workers' compensation claims that are unrelated to COVID-19 because of the challenges faced by medical providers and the medical community in general, as well as employers who must make additional accommodations.

Addressed in detail will be:

- issues regarding the compensability of COVID-19 claims in the State of Nebraska;
- managing the claims of injured employees that are unrelated to COVID-19 and the challenges they pose for employers;
- compensation issues for the "remote" employee;
- potential vaccination issues that may impact workers' compensation claims;
- legislative developments that may impact workers' compensation claims;
- specific questions you may have regarding COVID-19 and how it is impacting the workers' compensation claims you are seeing in your own workplace.
